２　次の英文は、エドガー・カーン(Edgar Cahn)が提唱した時間銀行(Time Bank)について書かれたものです。英文を読んで、あとの問いに答えなさい。（①～⑤は段落番号を示しています。）

① Money is necessary in our society because we depend on money. However, money sometimes makes our society unfair. Some people can receive services easily because they can pay for them. On the other hand, other people can't receive them because they don't have enough money. In the 1980s, the economy was bad, and many people lost their jobs in America. Many people started to think earning money was important and rich people were more valuable than poor people. In such a difficult condition, Edgar Cahn, a lawyer in America, wanted to change the situation. He thought about a system which didn't depend on money. He created a system called Time Bank. With the system, everyone could help each other without using money and it could make the community better and stronger.

② To use Time Bank, you must become a member. In Time Bank, you save time instead of money. You need to use your skills and your own time to help other members. The services you give don't have to be difficult. They include various tasks such as cooking, and teaching. A task for one hour is called one "time credit." For example, when you want someone to make lunch for you, you use one "time credit" and another member cooks for one hour. Then, the member gets one "time credit" by helping you. The members don't have to pay any money to get some help from others.

③ Time Bank is now accepted by many people. The members save a lot of "time credits," and use them to get various services they want. Here are two examples. Bob is a high school student and helps Mrs. Wilson, an elderly member. When she goes shopping, he carries heavy things for her. He has saved many "time credits" so far. He is learning how to play the guitar from another member by using his "time credits." He is looking forward to performing at a local festival in the summer. Josh has been a member of Time Bank for a long time. He has a skill to repair broken things and has been using the skill for other members. Thanks to him, they are happy because they can use the things again. Josh is also happy because he can use "time credits" to get a car ride to the airport. He likes to travel, but he doesn't have his own car. When he goes to the airport, he finds a member who takes him there by car. Taking a taxi is expensive, but he can save money by using "time credits." Moreover, supporting each other in Time Bank brings good things. Josh's service is kind to the environment, and good for the Earth.

⑤ Time Bank started to help each other without money. Today, this system is solving more problems in society. In many places, the population of elderly people has been increasing and they need help. For example, some of them live alone or others live in places far from the cities. They can't go to a supermarket or go to the hospital easily, but Time Bank can help these people. Moreover, it is said that people don't communicate with each other very often now. If Time Bank is introduced, people will have a chance to talk with others. This leads to good relationships. Time Bank is a system to give services without money and also a way to connect people.

Deciding My High School

3-3　Kaito Honda

Choosing a high school is a big decision. I have been thinking about my future because I'll have the entrance exam this year. My father often says to me, "It's important to go to a school with good programs that help you study well." He thinks studying hard is important. My mother encourages me, "Studying hard will be helpful for your future." I don't think their advice is wrong. However, when I hear their advice many times, I think that I should choose the school my parents recommend. Because of this, I feel pressure and I am worried about my high school choice. My homeroom teacher has a different idea. When I talked with him, he said, "What do you want to do in the future? Of course, studying hard in school is important, but it is more important to think about your future when you choose a school. If you find what to do in the future, you will see your high school life more clearly." The teacher's words moved me. I tried to think about my future, but I couldn't imagine anything.

To find an answer, I talked with my friends. I asked one of my friends. He loves soccer and is very good at it. He said, "I want to go to the school that has the strongest team! I want to be a great soccer player." He looked happy when he talked about his dream in high school. Then I asked another friend who loves drawing. She said with a bright smile, "I want to go to the school that has a special art program. The school has many art classes and I can learn a lot about art. I want to improve my drawing skills and express myself freely through drawing." They were excited. After listening to their dreams, I felt lonely because I didn't have one. It was hard for me to imagine my future and I was a little afraid to make a decision about a high school.

After talking with my friends, I did nothing special for a few weeks but I kept thinking about my future. Because choosing a high school was a very important decision for me, I felt uneasy. I didn't want to regret my school choice. One day, I asked myself, "What should I do now? I need to do something." I remembered that I enjoyed learning new things from a science book. So I started reading books again. However, I still cannot decide my school. I still have questions. How can I find the best school for me? Are there any other things I have to do? I know that finding answers is not easy, but I want to find the best school for me.

[ALT's comment]

Hi, Kaito. You are really thinking about your future. That's great. Your English is also great and I can understand what you're thinking and how you feel. I also feel pressure before making important decisions. I think many students in the third year are worried like you. You don't have to worry because you have started reading books to look for something you are interested in.

I'll give you some advice from my experience. First, talk with more people ― more friends, more teachers, and more family members. Then, express your thoughts and share them with people around you. This will help you see the things you are interested in more clearly. You may discover other things you like. Next, write the following points on paper ― the convenience of going to school, the atmosphere of the school, the school buildings, club activities, and the things you like. Then, choose the important things for you. By doing this, you'll understand the most important one for you. Visiting high schools is also helpful. You can feel the atmosphere and talk with the high school students there. These will help you find a good school for you.

The entrance exam is not the end. High school life will start after it. Your own effort in the school can make your future better. Don't look for an easy or safe choice. Think about the most important thing to you. You have the strength to create your own future.
